Product Briefing

Customers who don't pay can be the downfall of any construction related business. The loss of a single job can wipe out most of your profit for the entire year. Unlike most other industries, the construction industry has a unique advantage in this situation. If a customer does not pay, your business has the right to put a lien on the property of that particular job! Whether your company is a Supplier, General, or Sub-Contractor, the State's lien laws should be used to your company's advantage.

The Lien process can be a very effective means of collection if used properly. Most companies in the construction industry do not use this process. Often when a company starts taking advantage of the lien process, it is after getting burned on a big job. Some companies realize too late that they need to file a lien, and because they did not follow the State's statutes, the Lien is not valid. Can your company afford to lose $100,000.00, or even $1,000.00?

Most companies feel the process is too difficult. To follow one State's lien laws can be laborious. If you are doing work in multiple states, following all the law changes and updates can be a full time job in itself. Companies will often turn to a lien processing company to file the documents needed, but after a time this can get to be very expensive.

That's where Lien Writer™ comes in. We have taken the worry out of the lien process. Lien Writer™ software is the most comprehensive and affordable collection tool available to the construction industry today.
